Sporting Notes.

The local ball season opened Friday last, when Stony's junior players tackled the bunch from Martin's school. The local battery, Doll and Wolf, were hot in the test of shape, and the visitors repeated the victory of the week before, with about the same score. The local team is still going to lots of practice before challenging any more teams.

Stony's line up: Taborson, G. Gittel, G. Davis, Lutz, R. Doll, L. Ostway, A. Mohr, H. Wolf.

The Grove's left players met Winterburn on the 4th, the latter winning by 3 goals to 2.

A meeting of football enthusiasts will be held in the Town hall Monday evening next, May 12th.

The tennis courts are being kept up, and an entire new playing outfit has been ordered.

Good News for Farmers

"Prices to retailers and distributors of farm machinery will be cheaper" as a result of the Federal budget, in the opinion of Edmonton implement men. "To what extent the reduction will be made is hard possible to state until an adjustment on the sales tax on implements shipped to distributors since Jan. 1 is given.

It is good news to farmers, for while there was a 5 p.c. tax on farm implements sold previously, this will be taken off, providing the budget goes through. Dealers have already paid the tax on all machinery and many farmers have paid for implements bought since the beginning of the year.

Those who have done so will be given a rebate when the budget is passed and action on the percentage of reduction is made definitely known to dealers from their head of town.

Salvage Work Begins

Gold Bars Still Being Taken From Wreck of Lusitania

There are now only 154 bars of gold worth $1,300,000 on the wreck of the Lusitania, which was sunk during the war, and the salvage ship Racer will shortly endeavor to recover this, said Commander G. C. C. Dumas, in the course of a lecture at the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, London.

Four boxes of gold weighing 40 pounds each were recovered in such short time when the work started that it seemed as if operations would be finished in a week. A fierce gale sprung up, however, and the wreck collapsed, making salvage work very difficult. Of the 3,211 bars which went down with the ship, 1,857 have been recovered, during operations extending over six months, at a cost of two and one-half per cent.

Are Women to Rule Britain?

Proposed Law in Britain Would Give Women Enormous of Votes Over
Men

After an extraordinary discussion in the British Parliament, in which the women members took an active part, a bill to extend the parliamentary and local government franchise to women on the same terms as men passed its second reading on a vote of 206 to 17, and was sent on to a grand committee for further consideration.

This measure was a private members' bill moved by W. M. Adamson and seconded by Miss Jernegan, of the Labor party. If this bill should become law, every Tory of the old school will feel that a revolution has indeed occurred of which none can tell the outcome.

If the franchise is extended to women on the same terms as to men, it will mean the addition of four and a half million new women voters to the eight millions on the register. This would mean that the women voters would outnumber the male electors by 1,354,348.—Toronto Star.

Northern Alberta Pioneers Have Unshaken Faith In Its Agricultural Possibilities

"If some of the stock that carried me up to the arid lands, and which I want to put in the hands of the people, would look like this," is the opinion of a number of the old settlers in the Peace River country, of Northern Alberta.

A number of these men, who have spent from ten to fifteen years in the north, and are now more than satisfied with their prospects, are now working with a view to getting others on the vacant sections that were homesteaded from 1900 to 1914.

While keenly alert to the transportation handicap under which they labor, they have to object to this, for the time being, new, clean, fertile and cheap soil, relatively low taxes, abundant fuel and building material and water, and are pleased to make the best of things instead of the worst.

Having, they say, no common with settlers elsewhere, the most common of which is the habit of recklessness, borrowing at rates of interest that farming in normal times cannot reasonably be expected to earn, and having, through inexperience of the country and its varied problems, made mistakes in cropping and farm practice generally, we have certainly no stones to throw at others who have seen these things, but when we find the usual discouragement along the present railroad where we find such fertile soil, we feel at a disadvantage, and we feel at a disadvantage, and we feel at a disadvantage.

(1) Inability to handle cattle, due to an overstocking of the country.

(2) Too much borrowing at high rates of interest.

(3) The hazard of straight grain growing, with its alternate lot and lean seasons, the lot being too often completely consumed, leaving starvation rations for the lean.

(4) The general lack of crops, hunting, and obtaining nothing to the north.

(5) The excessive labor involved in raising a crop by a system of farming that involves an excessive risk of water.

While believing that many parts of the Peace River country will for a long time to come produce a considerable volume of wheat, for export, we are satisfied that the soil of this region will not stand exclusive grain farming as long, even, as the Red River valley in Dakota, where the light of the wheat grower has become a subject of inter-tribe concern, the United States Government. We believe that farming to be the only system for the Peace River country, and after a farming experience, ranging up to some extent to that of fifteen years, are convinced that for the area of land under the north country of the Peace River country, the best opportunity is to be found in the north country of the Peace River country.

Survey of Coal Deposits

Canadian Board of Trade Survey of Coal Deposits in Alberta

Geological surveys of all the coal deposits in the province was asked for by the Dominion Board of Trade. It was decided, also, to recommend that an inquiry be made as to the possibility of coal deposits in the north country of the Peace River country, and after a farming experience, ranging up to some extent to that of fifteen years, are convinced that for the area of land under the north country of the Peace River country, the best opportunity is to be found in the north country of the Peace River country.

Control Of Grasshoppers

The Most Successful Means to Combat This Menace

Means of grasshoppers by their means in the late summer and autumn of one year and the young appear about May in the following year. Every kind of field crop suffers from their presence. A leaflet issued by the Dominion Entomological Branch states that in Eastern Canada the following mixture broadcast over the infested fields has proved effective in control: Bran 20 pounds; Paris green or white arsenic half a pound; molasses 1 quart; juice of oranges or lemon 2 fruits with peels chopped fine; 2 1/2 gallons of water. The bran and Paris green or white arsenic should be mixed evenly. Another half that has been advised will be: Bran 20 pounds; Paris green or white arsenic half a pound; water 2 gallons. Twenty pounds of either of these baits is sufficient to treat 100 acres of growing crops. The spraying is the best time for broadcasting.

In the prairie provinces, what is known as the "Viable" mixture has proved effective. This is made by adding 1 pound of Paris green, or white arsenic, and 1 pound of salt to 10 gallons, by measure, of fresh house droppings; sufficient water only to make the mixture moist being added. Old pastures should be ploughed to a depth of at least six inches and immediately followed by harrowing.

Apples Popular on the Pacific

Varieties Which Are Most in Demand in the West

According to the Dominion Fruit Commission, who has secured the opinion of wholesale fruit dealers, the apple most in demand in the prairie provinces and British Columbia is the McIntosh. For second place, British Columbia names Yellow Wonder, Alberta, Wagener, Saskatchewan, Wealthy, and Manitoba, Northern Spy.

British Columbia and Alberta both name Delicious for fourth place, while Saskatchewan favors Spy, and Manitoba, Wagener. For fifth place, we have Delicious in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and Wagener in British Columbia and Alberta.

There is evidence to show that, speaking generally, the prairie fruit varieties that are grown quite extensively in British Columbia, while the eastern provinces, in addition to Spy and McIntosh, include towards Greening, Redglobe, King, Greening, Foxglove, Duchess, etc.

For Further Settlement Inquiry

Debate held has been received by Mr. H. Gladys Norton, M.P.C., representative of the Dominion Government, Experimental Station for Farm Machinery, that his department have taken over a large area back of the village of Wapiti, from the Northern Settlement Board. The village has been received as yet as to whether or not development work will be done on it. The added area will be in the neighborhood of some 100 acres. All of it has been under cultivation for a long time and has been allowed to go back into a wild state.

Premier MacDonald Regards The Experts' Reports As A God-Given Opportunity

To Assist Wheat Pool

Enthusiastic Government in Action Plans to Help to Project

The Saskatchewan Government has decided to render financial assistance to the wheat pool organization in the province. Premier Bennett announced in answering a formally decided in regard to the application. Premier Bennett stated that the assistance would be given in the form of a loan, the details of which were now being worked out.

Adopting liability to give exact figures, completion being expected at the close of the season, J. K. Wilson, president of the Saskatchewan Cooperative Wheat Producers' League, the pool organization, placed what he declared was a conservative estimate of the average year under contract at $200,000. He added the information that the organization had 1,500,000 acres in old contracts which were not covered by wheat. He concluded by saying that for these contracts he believed he was quite safe in saying the required six million acres would be under contract by the middle of June.

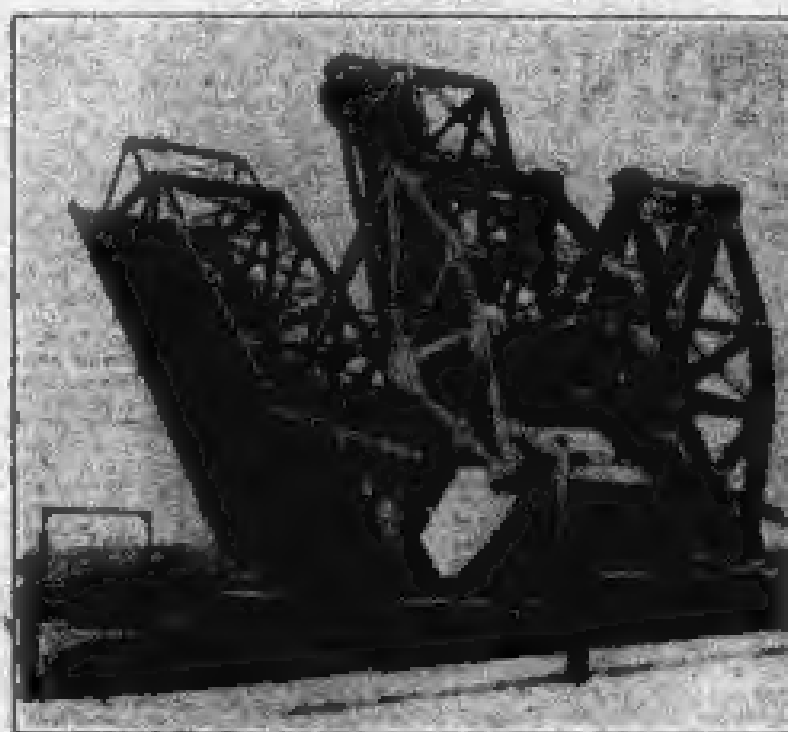

Work On H. S. Line

A gang of 15 men and a locomotive have proceeded to M. 127, Hudson's Bay Railway, where a gravel pit is to be opened for repair work on the line. Sixteen railroads of the line have been shipped and later sent and the line will be sent later. It is estimated that two will be required for completing the line from the P. & N. M. 127.

One Of Victoria's Wonders

Johnstone Street Bridge, Victoria, B.C., showing both bascules open. The bascule on the right is reserved for the exclusive use of the Canadian and Pacific Railway.

Johnstone Street Bridge in its complete form, as well as the other bascule on the left, is reserved for the exclusive use of the Canadian and Pacific Railway.

Completed in January, 1914, at a cost of $1,100,000, this magnificent monument to engineering will make possible a direct route from the world-famous Esplanade Harbor to Oak Bay, a distance of six miles, and bridge the old, dangerous, Indian Reserve and other industrial areas of Victoria. West into communication with the Pacific City.

The bridge is a double-deck structure, and was built by the Canadian Bridge Company, who also designed the other bridge. The time spent in its construction covered a period of nearly three years. It is the first massive structure to be built in the west, and is a masterpiece of engineering. There are in reality two bridges, the highway and the railway, each running independently, and each with its own set of bascules.

provision arranged for the expansion of a further $1,000,000 to build, and that quantities of materials were employed. In the sub-structure of the bridge 15,000 cubic yards of concrete were used, and in the super-structure 1,000 tons of steel. The bridge has been made for street car lines to run over the bridge when conditions allow.

The Canadian and Pacific Railway tracks have been ready for traffic immediately the bridge opened in January. The Canadian Pacific Railway having contributed $100,000 to the cost of the bridge, in order to claim the privilege. The Provincial Government gave further towards the bridge fund and the balance of the expense is being borne by the City of Victoria.

So perfectly does the machinery of the bridge work, with its advanced bascules, that the entire operation is conducted unobtrusively by lever manipulation, without effort by a single attendant operator in charge.

Premier Bennett, in a recent speech, stated that in the winter of 1914, when he was in parliament, declared he was not going to give a single chance of getting the report of the report on the wheat pool organization, and I hope to be with you in the future to see what it is all about.

"I regard the experts' report," continued Mr. MacDonald, "as an opportunity for a peace settlement and agreement, which, if not taken advantage of by the wheat pool organization, will be one of the most God-given opportunities ever bestowed upon us."

The Prime Minister declared he was glad President Coolidge had referred to the wheat pool organization.

"When discussion comes to the discussion," he said, "the President will not be a stranger to the wheat pool organization."

Mr. MacDonald appeared in France to work with him and the other allied nations in offering Germany a real chance to make a peace and keep it.

The Prime Minister said, he was going to do his best to carry out that policy, rapidly and patiently, but without any hesitating or changing at all.

Mr. MacDonald began his discussion of foreign affairs with an expression of his hope for helping out Canada in the war.

"If I can only do anything before I leave this office," he said, "the more sure of the difficulties that have been in the way of European settlement, if I can do anything to help my country and France into closer relationship, if I can do anything to enable Central Europe to find its legs, and with help and courage to its heart, but with a new realization of international co-operation, then I shall have done my duty, and I shall be glad to see it as a pretty satisfactory one at that."

"Some of our papers are talking about France being isolated. That is the very last thing I want. I want to stand side by side with France. I want to see France to know that France, as far as her security is concerned, has no better friend than this country."

"I am personally convinced that these experts' reports, joined together with the experience of the last four years, ought to make both France and ourselves see that before common friendship, and by that alone, work the willfully working with England, working with the English nation, and offering Germany a real chance to make a peace and keep it. In that way, in that friendly way, in that old way, we can open the door to peace, happiness and international cooperation."

Highly Laid Employment

Maritime Provinces and British Columbia Daily Provinces Showing Increase

Employment at the beginning of April showed a contraction of over one per cent. The contraction of operations required by employers was somewhat smaller in that industry at the same period of 1913, although the shrinkage of last year affected a much larger percentage of the reported payroll.

Employers in the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia reported increases in their payroll, but in the remaining provinces there was a downward tendency.

Irish Boundary Question

The Irish Free State Government has sent a note to the British colonial office, asking that it give effect to the boundary article of the Anglo-Irish treaty under which the British Government would appoint a commission to draw a definite line between Ulster and the Irish Free State, says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Dublin.

Her slipping laugh at his retort indicated that she appreciated the humor of his allusion. "No," she said, "while we are really horse thieves, and have been discovered by the police with stolen horses in our possession, we trust in the pardoned honor of our prisoner, and the success of our aim, to hold our captive in subjection."

In this way they traveled three deep during several miles of their journey. They kept up a spirited conversation that covered in its range many topics of interest. College educated himself, Ronald found that his companions' range of reading had covered the works of all well-known authors which they were both able to discuss with an understanding and intellectual grasp that surprised him. Expressing surprise at their unusual accomplishments in that respect, he asked them how it was. In reply Mr. Fraser told him that, feeling the disadvantages under which they were placed, by being so far removed from schools and other advantages for their daughter, they occupied the long hours of the winter nights in reading in turns to each other, and in discussing the works they read. He said they found this mode of pastime very interesting, and thus the loneliness of their home life in the lack of neighbors and social advantages were largely overcome.

This interesting information heightened his admiration for his companions. Being of a studious and literary turn of mind himself, their conversation proved to be of intense interest to him, as his also seemed to be entertaining to them. In this way the otherwise tedious hours of the long trip passed most pleasantly.

Gradually, as they advanced, the deep blue haze of the Moose Mountains looming in the distance, and blending more and more with the green of the vegetation, indicated the progress they were making. Though the sun was hot, a light western breeze sweeping over the prairie added not a little to the comforts of the trip. By Ronald's weariness of his two days' exertions was forgotten in the pleasure he experienced in the society of the young woman riding by.

BEFORE MY BABY CAME

I Was Greatly Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sydney, Ont.—"I took your medicine before my baby was born, and it was a great help to me as I was very poorly until I had started to take it. I just felt as though I was tired out all the time and would have weak, faint spells. My nerves would bother me until I could get little rest, night or day. I was told by a friend to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I only took a few bottles and it helped me wonderfully. I would recommend it to any woman. I am doing what I can to recommend this good medicine. I will say that little book you sent me to any one I can help. You can write the greatest of pleasure use my name in regard to the Vegetable Compound if it will help others take it."—Mrs. MARY MILLIGAN, Sydney, Ont.

It is remarkable how many cases have been reported similar to this one. Many women are poorly at such times and get into a weakened, run-down condition, when it is essential to the mother, as well as the child, that her strength be kept up.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for the mother at this time. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and does not contain any harmful drugs. It may be taken in safety by the nursing mother.

his side. Her sprightly bearing under the strain through which she had passed, and through which she was still passing, indicated a vitality that seemed to surpass human endurance. Showing no sign of weariness, she kept up her part of the conversation with a vivacity and cheerfulness that was most surprising to him.

Toward the late hours of the afternoon they reached the foothills of the mountains. Here, in order to relieve her mother's distress, she decided to gallop ahead, and so the first bearer of the good news. Accordingly setting spurs to her horse, she was soon out of sight over the brow of the first ridge of hills. Within an hour of her departure, they reached the house and soon had their horses unloaded. They were assisted in this task by a couple of young men from the settlement, who, on learning of the kidnapping, had come to the ranch to offer their assistance.

Through feelings of delicacy, Ronald remained behind chatting with the men, while Mr. Fraser went into the house to rejoin the family. Both men, Ronald learned, were on transport service during the rebellion. What interested them chiefly was, however, the particulars regarding the abduction. They ardently had learned something of the events from Miss Fraser herself before Ronald arrived, but wishing to hear more of the details, they endeavored to make him their informant. He accordingly related the facts to them.

Mr. Fraser, in due time appeared at the door and invited them into the house. As Ronald entered the large room, Mrs. Fraser, still showing the signs of distress and anguish she had suffered during their absence, arose to greet him. Taking his extended hand into both her own she held it clasped, while for a few moments, unable to find words to express herself, she scanned his face with eyes dimmed with tears of joy and happiness. Composing herself, at last she said: "Oh, Mr. MacRae, it was God's Providence that sent you our way when he did to save our child! I cannot find words to express our deep gratitude to you for what you have done for us. But, I am sure, God will reward you."

"Mrs. Fraser, it is sufficient reward for me to have earned your gratitude. I was fortunate to have been in a position to give what help I could at a time when I was needed. We were fortunate in being able to save your daughter in time before harm had overtaken her, and to have her brought home safe to you again. In that itself I feel that I am well rewarded. What I have done, with the assistance of Mr. Fraser, was only doing a duty that any other man would have done in the same position. At the same time, Mrs. Fraser, I thank you for your most kind words."

"Mary has told me what she has gone through, and she feels more than grateful to you for what you have done. It was a sore trial for us while it lasted, but God has been good to us in restoring our daughter to us without harm. While we feel that we shall never be able to repay you for what you have done for us, our gratitude and blessings shall follow you to the year's end to come wherever you may be."

Deeply interested, the only words Ronald could find to express himself were: "It is kind of you to say that, Mrs. Fraser, and I shall ever bear that fact in mind."

As the two strangers intimated their intention to start on their return home, Mrs. Fraser persuaded upon them to remain for dinner. She then proceeded to set the table and make preparations for the evening meal. The men, in the meantime, sat around and engaged in conversation till the dinner was prepared. They had not long to wait, for the table set to accommodate six, was soon ready and laden with everything to tempt the appetite. After inviting them to sit in, she went to the doorway and called her daughter, who was dressing for the dinner.

The few moments that preceded the daughter's appearance were exciting minutes for Ronald, who had not yet seen her decked out in female garb. He awaited her appearance with a rapidly pulsating heart. As she entered the room, he immediately arose from his chair at the table and, stepping back, he drew out the chair reserved for her on his left. As she sat down she acknowledged his courtesy with a nod and, smiling, thanked him. You mentally confessed to take note of her appearance, he sat down beside her and carried out his part with sufficient composure to conceal his mental agitation. Trained in the art of table manners, and conscious of common usage, he did his part with a natural ease of manner that attracted no attention from those around him. She, "to the mother born," responded with equal grace.

Mrs. Fraser, presiding at the head of the table and generous to a fault, passed the good things with which her table was supplied, and urged her guests to partake generously. This the appetizing food tempted them to do without urging. The two strangers had a long ride of twenty-five miles ahead of them before reaching their homes for the night, there was, accordingly, no pressing on them to prolong their stay. Before leaving, however, they intimated to Mrs. Fraser that, judging from the interest the people of their settlement were taking in the disappearance of her daughter, she need not be surprised if she should have several guests for the following evening. She told them that she would be pleased to see as many of them as felt like coming. "We have lots of room," she said, "we shall be pleased to entertain them the best we can."

After a refreshing bath in the cool waters of the lake, Ronald was strolling along the beach in the direction of the house when Mr. Fraser called him to come and join the family circle on the veranda. Here he had the first opportunity of getting a good look at the young lady as she graced the family life—the young lady around whom his chief interest at the present time centered. As she sat in front of him, now delicately attired in a moose frock, her simple fingers deftly working on an intricate piece of embroidery, and at the same time keeping up an animated conversation, this young soldier, so long removed from the special advantages to which he had been accustomed, became deeper and deeper enamored in her attractive charms.

Her thick mass of wavy brown hair was neatly arranged with slight waves covering the upper corners of her forehead; thence it was drawn with a wavy sweep along the sides of her head, covering the ears, and gathered in a neat broad roll at the back of her head and neck. Her full blue-gray eyes, encircled by long curved dark lashes, were overhung by dark slightly arching brows and a full intellectual forehead. Her regular features showed strength and refinement, lending a cast to her countenance that would attract attention among many—a face that would be noticed for distinction rather than for beauty. Her skin, while showing evidences of weather tan, still retained its natural unclouded smoothness of surface. In appearance she was the picture of health and perfect physical development. She had that strength of carriage and poise that is characteristic of an athletic and active life in the open.

Ronald took in these details of her personal appearance while engaged in conversation on general topics and matters of local and home interest. This was kept till the dusk of the evening, when Mrs. Fraser suggested retiring and taking a long rest in the morning. This suggestion was readily agreed to by all three weary travellers. They were all commencing to show signs of weariness, especially Mr. Fraser, who, as he sat in his chair, was yielding to nature's demand for sleep.

"Mr. MacRae," said Mrs. Fraser, "your room is the one on the north-west corner at the head of the stairs. I shall leave a light in it for you when you feel like retiring. I hope that you will enjoy a good rest, for I am sure you will need it after all that you have gone through the past two days. Goodnight all."

"Goodnight, mother dear," added Mary, as she hugged and kissed her mother affectionately on retiring.

Ronald was shown to his room a short time after this by Mr. Fraser. It was one of four bedrooms into which the upper floor of the house was divided. While the room, whose rustic walls were whitewashed, was chiefly furnished with rustic hand-made furnishings, evidently the handy work of Mr. Fraser himself, it was neat, dry and clean, and as suggestive of homeliness as the lower apartments of the house. What particularly took his fancy was the white immaculately clean sheet between which he was to sleep—a luxury he had not enjoyed since he had enlisted with the Queen's Own Rifles at Toronto four years before, and with which regiment he had served until selected, on account of his skill in horsemanship, to act as scout in advance of the troops. It was a pleasant development to an unexpected and exciting two days' adventure. His last thoughts as he yielded to the fatigue that was by now commencing to overpower his vital energies, were of the young woman—thoughts which within the past two days, had become an obsession with him.

One Flies to the North

"Contact" "Contact" The last message went between pilot and mechanic, and with a start of the engine and propeller the giant, human and baggage freighted plane, glides swiftly over the surface of the Quinee. One feels the churning water tumbling at the bottom of the boat until momentum has increased to such extent that a touch of the "stick" causes the Vickers Viking to slowly rise.

Two turns in as many minutes and the passenger, having adjusted his goggles and seated himself more comfortably, peers, at first cautiously, over the side of the pit, and far below him lies the little town of Angliers, the head of the Canadian Pacific boat which twists and turns in and out of the forest to the south like a living thing. The sea is as a map below, lakes and rivers shining in the distance and beneath, and ragged patches of bush and arable land smudged here and there like a child's attempt to depict relief.

Turning east the plane heads down Lake Quinee, following the water course to Lake Expansive, — one sees from the air how appropriate is its name, — thence north for some fifteen miles up the Ottawa River and further north over one of its tributaries to Lake Fortune and Royce, upon near which the plane leaves the glorious rolling clouds and gradually sinks into one more the water tumps the bottom of the hull, checking it with sudden jerks which tend to slow the boat until it stops within a few feet of tie-up. One wonders how the pilot could, at such a speed, have judged his distance so well. But then he does the same thing more than once each day belonging to the new Gold Fields of Quebec. In fifty minutes, passengers and supplies which, before the air service was started took two days at the least to arrive.

Commencing May 15th the Air Service to the Gold Fields will be regular on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, large flying boats capable of carrying five people being scheduled to meet all Canadian Pacific trains at Angliers. This service, which will eliminate the hardships of the coast and enable prospectors and tourists to travel to the Royce Mining District in less than an hour will include regular stops where they are required and accommodation is available.

Here and There

It is estimated that over 50,000 tons were sent with cars to Alberta in 1922, as compared with only 1,000 tons in 1917. This is a good indication of how rapidly cere culture is increasing in Western Canada in connection with wheat farming operations.

All previous records of Canadian freight transportation were broken when a solid train-load of automobiles reached the Pacific Coast from Windsor, Ont., over Canadian Pacific lines recently. The distance of 1,800 miles was covered in seven days, or slightly less than 26 minutes. The train, which consisted of 44 cars, each containing 8 Ford automobiles, was more than a third of a mile long and was handled on practically passenger schedule.

The splendid record profile of the Canadian Pacific Railway is well shown in the annual report for the fiscal year ended December 31st, 1922, which has just been issued. The gross earnings of the Company for the year were $1,327,000.61, the working expenses $750,331.07, and the net earnings, $576,669.54.

A large party of Scottish farmers, ploughmen, farm workers, and their families, is expected to arrive at Montreal in June. The party, which will sail on the Canadian Pacific steamer "Marburn," will be conducted by the Scottish representative of the Canadian Pacific Department of Colonization and Development.

Alberta has experienced an average yield of spring wheat of 194 bushels per acre over a period of twenty-six years, according to a chart prepared by the Department of Agriculture. In addition, winter wheat has averaged over the same period 20.12 bushels per acre, 25.79 bushels barley, 24.12 bushels oats, 11.84 bushels and flax, 2.71 bushels.

A section of the animal kingdom and convention of the officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which were held at Quebec on March 22nd, was the representation, in the banquet hall, of a full-sized locomotive of the latest type emerging from a tunnel. Built of wood at Angus Shops, Montreal, it was in all respects perfect. At a pre-arranged moment, it emitted steam and smoke, the bell rang and the whistle blew, while the headlight became a moving picture projector.

Indications of a great success in immigration are seen by Canadian Pacific officials in the arrival at St. John, N.B., during the week-end of March 29-30, of 2,441 third-class passengers, aboard the Company's steamers Montcalm and Metagama. The Montcalm had on board 1,244 of these passengers, which constitutes a record for the season.

Out of a total production of 18,738,100 pounds of creamery butter in 1922, Manitoba exported 3,000,000 pounds, valued at $1,512,100. Shipments were made to Great Britain, New York, Chicago and Montreal. In addition, about 200,000 pounds of butter fat were shipped to the United States.

In a speech to the higher officers of the Canadian Pacific Railway at the occasion of the recent convention at Quebec, Mr. E. W. Beatty, President, pointed out that 40 per cent of the company's stock is held by Great Britain, 21 per cent in Canada and 39 per cent in the United States. It is, therefore, a corporation absolutely controlled within the British Empire and, he added, that control is being appreciably strengthened as the years go on.

Quebec's new goldfield in St. Lawrence, north of the Des Quins branch of the Canadian Pacific from Montreal, is to be made accessible by an aeroplane service to be inaugurated by the Laurentide Air Service Limited, on May 15th. Prospecting, tourists and supplies will be able to cross the fifty mile gap between the end of the road and the goldfields, which formerly required two days to cover, in less than an hour by the flying boat to be used in the service.

WESTERN CATTLE IN EUROPE

Desired From United Kingdom Constant Since Lifting of Embargo, Says Col.
Muller.

Montreal--Sounding a note of the strongest possible faith in the optimism for the future of the agricultural in Western Canada, Colonel H. A. Muller, prominent member of the Imperial Cattle Exchange, arrived in Montreal on Sunday, announcing to an interviewer yesterday:
"The situation on the prairies is rapidly improving," the Colonel declared, "and the Westerner is taking heart. Moreover, many of those who in recent years left the farm are returning. I consider the importation of Western cattle is beginning to turn strongly from the city to the farm once more. The three prairie provinces especially have a transitionary future, and if the consideration is given to their particular needs, the realization of that future cannot be long deferred."

Asked to explain some of the influences which, in his opinion, would lead to hasten the do-dash Age for Western Canada the Colonel unhesi-tantly pleaded first for a better understanding between East and West.
"The Western farmer can also do a great deal to help himself," the Colonel added. "I consistently advocate that all farmers old there should go in for raising livestock as well as other stuff, especially for raising high-grade stock, and that those now in that game should stick to it. They should also stop crowding their shipments--and this applies not only to livestock but to other products, such as grain--into three months or so of the year.
Then they won't find themselves forced to take low prices because of the rush, and things will be better for the country generally as well."

Despite many recent setbacks, there is, the Colonel is convinced, a world market for good Western cattle. The demand from the United Kingdom, he says, has been constant and heavy since the lifting of the embargo, though it has been affected adversely by the recent closure of Liverpool, Glasgow and some other ports on account of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease.

Colonel Muller is in an excellent position to speak with authority on the cattle situation, for he has been shipping cattle overseas steadily and intends to continue. Recently he shipped 145 head from Winnipeg to Montreal. The train, supplemented by four cattleboats, 100 additional head from Toronto, on the Western left at 10 p.m. on Wednesday via Canadian Pacific and arrived at the stockyards here on Friday morning.
The Colonel following down by a passenger train which left Winnipeg on Thursday night. The shipment is bound for Quebec via St. John, N.B. The Colonel paid a warm tribute to the Company for the service in which it had handled his consignment.
"The shippers in stock was valuable help," he stated, "and not only did they take up this line of freight in a few hours in the Canadian Pacific yards here, but they are already better than they were in Winnipeg. This experience, and my inspection of these yards, has convinced me that ranchers may ship their cattle via Canadian Pacific with confidence that they will be promptly and rapidly handled."
